Bestselling author and former Deputy D.A., William P. Wood, gives an inside look at the Sacramento Boarding House murders with this chilling true excursion into the dark heart of a female serial killer.

Dorothea Montalvo Puente looked like everyone’s grandmother, but evil lurked within. She was the rarest of murderers—a cold-blooded, female serial killer. This shocking story of these gruesome murders for profit is told with a novelist’s skill and page-turning suspense by Wood, who had earlier prosecuted Puente for drugging and robbing the elderly. He knew intimately the malice that coursed through her veins and thought he had seen the last of this callous and calculating woman. But Puente’s chameleon-like deviousness helped her reappear as a sweet, benevolent landlord and later allowed her to escape police custody even as her yard revealed gaping graves.

The Bone Garden chronicles the discoveries that ignited a media firestorm and transfixed a nation, putting an entirely new face on evil in this country.
